they are needed for healthy cell replication, which is particularly important when cells (such as those in the vagina) are bombarded with infection.

the article is an interesting one and i can't really comment on the 4 number (although even if true it does mean that 96 of us are raising our own children)