as long as flow is present in a process you will typically find the need for some type of pressure control it's most common in older adults